Silver Rain (Acrimonious) - Step By Step-Project feat. Yannick Schmidt

Lyrics written by Yannick Schmidt

The pines out in the garden will never feed the flames
The weather tastes so strange again today
Deep inside my hollow and broken reveries
I rip my heart to countless smithereens

And I can't see...

And when the silence falls apart
And the ashes fill my heart
Rain on down on me
My acrimonious dream

My little savior, against them all
A brittle failure inside the wall
A little favor could break my fall
A bitter savor could end it all

We've built these walls together, cathedrals to our pain
Their ashes come undone in silver rain
Cast aside in silence, a voice you'll never hear
Your scent is still a remedy to me

And I can't see...

And when the silence falls apart
And the ashes fill my heart
Rain on down on me
My acrimonious dream

My little savior, against them all
A brittle failure inside the wall
A little favor could break my fall
A bitter savor could end it all

Guess I turned to stone the day I lost myself in silver rain. I cracked the sky, all hell broke loose. I know the way but I can't move.
I know the way but I slip and break.

And when the silence falls apart
And the ashes fill my heart
Rain on down on me
My acrimonious dream
And when the silence falls apart
And the ashes fill my heart
Rain on down on me
My acrimonious dream

My acrimonious dream
My acrimonious dream
